

R E M A R K S

The present amendment is presented under the provisions of 37 C.F.R. 1.312 in order to correct certain errors which appear in claim 29 of the application as allowed by the Examiner.

In reviewing the claim as allowed, it has been noted that certain subject matter supported in the application and the original claims has been omitted from the claims. This omission occurred in Applicants' AMENDMENT of June 2, 1986 in amending the definition of the group R^3 in claim 29. Claim 29 originally included, within the definition of R^3 , the possibility of this group being a lower alkylene group. Support for this subject matter is apparent from the specification at page 5, line 6 from the bottom. In amending claim 29, this definition was inadvertently omitted. Support for the subject matter is thus apparent from the specification as filed and the subject matter is patentable in the same manner as the remaining subject matter of the claim. Thus, this definition is now inserted at the point in claim 29 at which the Examiner's Amendment has deleted the term "(5) phenethyl".

It is also to be pointed out that by inserting this definition at this point in the claim, any necessity for renumbering the remaining definitions of the term R^3 is avoided.

Furthermore, by way of the present amendment, certain changes are effected within the definition of the group R^6 . Notice that in the Examiner's Amendment, the Examiner has deleted the term "(7) phenethyl". The Examiner's change requires a renumbering of the additional choices for the group R⁶ and this change is now effected.

Applicants respectfully submit that the changes effected herein merely correct manifest errors in the claim and place it in optimum condition for issuance. No additional search of the prior art will be required by the Examiner and it is thus believed that the changes are proper. Thus, entry of this amendment is requested.

Respectfully submitted,

YOSHIO HAMASHIMA
